HITLER SHOUTS THREAT OF WAR IF CZECHS BALK

Benes Called "Liar" As Germany's Leader Reiterates October 1 As Deadline for Sudeten Surrender

Adolf Hitler spoke to the German nation and an anxious world today, repeating his recent ultimatum to Czechoslovakia, but pleading more for a surrender of Czechoslovakia than threatening immediate war. He stood firm in his demand that Sudetenland be placed immediately under the rule of Berlin and declared that October 1 is the deadline beyond which the patience of the German people will not extend.

Seated on the speaker's platform as Hitler appeared were most of the military leaders of Germany. Prince August Wilhelm, son of the former kaiser, was prominent among those present, he being closely identified with the Nazi movement.

It was a good-natured and laughing crowd of Germans that awaited the appearance of their national chieftain. The Sports Palace was crowded to its capacity of 15,000 more than two hours before the address began.

Joseph Goebbels, German minister of public enlightenment, told Hitler in opening the meeting, that he could rely on the German people as they rely on him and that the entire populace stood united behind him. Prolonged cheers followed the pronouncement. Goebbels spoke briefly.

Hitler took the platform immediately, declaring that not the fuhrer, but a German was speaking. He said that the question that has moved Germany is not Czechoslovakia, but President Benes. He outlined the history of the National Socialist movement in Germany, saying that he has no intention to suppress other nationalities. He referred to the Versailles treaty and the terrible hardships it imposed on the German people.

"If Germany has become great," he declared, "Germany owes that greatness entirely to her own efforts, the achievement being accomplished despite the animosity of other nations."

Germany asks under all circumstances the right of national equality, the fuhrer declared. He referred to the disarmament of Germany and the many subsequent armament conferences and said that his many disarmament proposals had been ignored. Then he declared that Germany had completed an armament without equal in the history of the world.

"I have within these five years spent billions in order to arm the German nation," he told the assemblage. Prolonged cheers followed the declaration. "I have given Germany an air force that will protect the nation from any and all air attacks." He said that within the last five years Germany had been arming day and night.

Hitler reminded his audience that he himself was a soldier in the last war and that he knows something of the horrors of war. He said that more and more people are asking for constructive peace. He said that a condition under which one side says "I will never make war" and the other says "I will make war whenever it suits me" can not be tolerated.

Hitler resurrected the Alsace Loraine question when he said that the people of that district never had been given an opportunity to declare to which side they belong. He pointed out that despite this fact all territorial differences between Germany and France had been settled.

Hitler paid tribute to Mussolini when he declared "The solution to the problems between Germany and Italy is not due entirely to myself, but largely to the great man across the Alps." He said that a close and indissoluble bond of affection holds the German and Italian nations together. He said that here too he had made a tremendously important concession. He declared that the nations are united in preserving the peace of their peoples. He said "This is not a phrase, but a declaration that no democratic liar can wipe out of the world."

Hitler said that if France never has relinquished her right to the protection of her nationals in Alsace Loraine that Germany certainly has the right to protect her millions of nationals in other regions. He said that somewhere concessions must end.

He said that the German people now confront the last big problem which must be solved and which will be solved. This is the last territorial demand which I expect to make in Europe, but it is a demand on which I must insist. He was discussing his demand on Czechoslovakia. He said that it was not so many years ago that the statesmen of Europe established states and then forgot the welfare of the people within them.

Hitler said that the country of Czechoslovakia was formed against the will of many, including Germans, Hungarians, Poles and others that were included within the boundaries. He said that Benes at Versailles brought the state into being by a series of lies. He said that some 600,000 Germans were forced to leave Czechoslovakia. He said that up to 1938 Benes was determined to root out all the German residents of his country.

The fuhrer declared that France wished Czechoslovakia because it provided a jumping off place for planes to bomb Germany and that Red Russia wished it as a means of access to Middle Europe. He said that in the German part of Czechoslovakia there exists the greatest death rate, the greatest child mortality and the greatest poverty. Hitler hurled criticism at what he declared is the hypocrisy of the world's democracy. He said that the greatest understanding of the situation today is within the mind of Benito Mussolini. The crowd shouted "Duce!" "Duce!" "Duce!"

The fuhrer declared that if necessity ever arises that Germany and Italy will fight together in a solid block. The speech then returned to Czechoslovakia. Hitler saying that from the time he declared that conditions there must change that there has been a reign of terror through which the German nation has displayed extreme patience. "We thought until the last minute that the Czechs might see the light, but they have refused justice because they know that they are backed by France and England. Terrorism increased. When I asked that after 20 years the right of self determination be exercised there followed wholesale arrests and new persecutions. Self determination is the best solution, the most natural." He asked how Germany can be expected to stand by while Benes increased the suffering of three and one-half million Germans. "Finally," he shouted, "our patience must be exhausted. Benes must think that we have eternal patience, but he should realize that there must be an end."

"England and France joined in our demand that there be self determination for the oppressed. Sly Benes then found a way out, but first the Germans were to be driven out of his country. And so, as a result of Benes' policy 137,000 fugitives have escaped across the border into Germany. Germany after more than 20 years of patience can not now be accused of impatience."

Hitler said that he had sent a final memorandum to the British government. The substance of that demand is that the districts in Czechoslovakia where the people are German must come to Ger-

Early reports are that there is a large crop of squirrels this season.

BRITISH READY FOR EMERGENCY

Anti-Aircraft Units And Other Forces Called To "Clear Decks"

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(UP)—The war office called out the anti-aircraft units of the territorial army (Britain's national guard) today. The war office also called out the coastal defense units of the territorial army.

The air ministry recalled all air force personnel from leave. The air ministry also called up the observer corps attached to the royal air force and announced the institution of an air raid warning system.

It was announced that under an agreement with provisions markets all over the country, the present prices of bacon, ham, butter, cheese, lard, cooking fat and lard, cooking fat and margarine will be pegged for 14 days.

many, not after Benes has succeeded in driving out one or two million Germans, but now."

"I have established the boundary. I have insisted that the territory that is German must come home and that the border regions can be left to later decision. I am prepared to let them vote all over Czechoslovakia. Since it might be said that if we supervise the voting it might be unfair I am prepared to let the voting be supervised by an international commission."

Hitler said that the memorandum handed to the British is a demand for nothing more than Benes already has promised. "Now, I am told that it is unacceptable. All I ask is that Benes do the things he has promised. Benes always has made promises; he has never kept them. Now, he is commanded to keep them."

"Benes must give us this territory by October 1," Hitler declared. "Benes always has had the hope that England, France and Russia would make the carrying out of his promise impossible. But today just two men face each other—Benes and myself. And when two such different personalities face each other I have as a true and faithful German done my duty."

Hitler said he was grateful to Chamberlain for all his efforts, telling him that the German people wish only peace and that he assured Britain that Germany wishes no other territory in Europe. He declared, however, that the Sudeten problem must come to an end now. "Benes must accept our demand or we will take the freedom that we insist these Germans have."

Hitler said that the world must know that in four and one-half years of war and in many years of peace that he had never been a coward. "I am now moving forward ahead of my people as a soldier. And today back of me there is a mighty people, a people different than lost the war in 1918. The lonely soldier of a few years ago marches forward and a nation of brave men and women follow him. Today we are a whole unified people, fortified against any danger. We believe that Benes can just as well go now."

Hitler said that he had sent a final memorandum to the British government. The substance of that demand is that the districts in Czechoslovakia where the people are German must come to Ger-

BRITAIN SENDS FIRM MESSAGE TO NAZI CHIEF

Roosevelt's Step Encourages Foreign Democracies to Fight to Avert War Over Czech Minorities

BULLETIN
PRAGUE, Sept. 26.—(UP)—Czechoslovakia today informed Great Britain that Adolf Hitler's demands for surrender of the Sudetenland by October 1 were unacceptable and should be subject to further discussions.

By UNITED PRESS
Europe's democracies, encouraged by President Roosevelt, fought as never before today to avoid a war.

"Go get gas masks," thundered loud-speaker trucks on British streets. "Women and children, go today. Get gas masks."

Similar grave warnings echoed through many capitals of Europe—Paris, Prague, Berlin—as governments concentrated millions of fighting men along the frontiers. But the military preparations, led by a united front of Great Britain and France, did not mean that hope of peace had been abandoned.

Soon after President Roosevelt's direct appeal to Fuhrer Adolf Hitler and Czech President Eduard Benes to settle their quarrel over the Sudetenland peacefully, the British and French governments flew a last-minute appeal to Berlin to avoid a general conflagration. It was understood they were partly influenced by Mr. Roosevelt's plea.

Sir Horace Wilson of the British foreign office, took the message by airplane from London for delivery to Hitler. He hoped to deliver it to the Fuhrer before the latter spoke. It was a firmly worded message telling Germany that Hitler's ultimatum giving the Czechs until October 1 to surrender the Sudetenland was unacceptable. Message said.

After 24 hours of conferences among British and French government and military leaders in London, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain summoned parliament to meet Wednesday and Premier Edouard Daladier flew back to Paris to complete preparations for the showdown.

Authorized by President Roosevelt to pledge the federal government's full cooperation, Hopkins meets with Governor Charles F. Hurley of Massachusetts, Governor Robert E. Quinn of Rhode Island, Governor Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut and Governor Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Who is the most powerful man in the new Germany after Fuhrer Adolf Hitler? Who is the Nazi bigwig whom insiders predict will head the Third Reich should the ex-house painter suddenly pass from the scene? Ninety-nine readers out of one hundred will instantly say "Marshal Hermann Goering," the corpulent bemedalled German air minister, and the Reich's famed No. 2 Nazi.

Dangers In Europe Force Uncle Sam To Rapid Armament Pace

PROGRAM NOT REVEALED

Washington Watches Crisis With Keen Interest; Developments Noted

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(UP)—Prospects of another draft of much more than $1,000,000,000 on taxpayers to maintain the pace of United States national defense armament are arising today toward certainty as Washington follows the ominous news from Europe.

War and navy department officials for some time have been preparing estimates for next year's national defense budget. High as they have been in the last five years, those figures may go even higher. In his July 13 budget summation, Mr. Roosevelt estimated national defense spending for the current fiscal year at $1,050,000,000. Expenditure under the 1938 emergency naval program will hit their stride next year.

Plan Not Revealed

The administration, however, is not revealing its national defense plans as major powers teeter on the brink of war.

Washington developments during Europe's painful week-end included:

1. Mr. Roosevelt appealed to Germany and Czechoslovakia to avoid war.
2. Officials visualized 5,000 American citizens in Czechoslovakia and some 88,000 on the continent as potentially a serious problem in event of war. Two American warships, in British waters, could be used to transport refugees.

3. Congressional temper, judged by statements of members, appears to be "hands off."

4. Fiscal experts have informed action appears to be necessary immediately to protect American financial equilibrium against unsettling foreign developments.

5. Chairman Dies of the house committee investigating un-American activities, sought formation of a league for peace and Americanism to fight propaganda.

6. Justice department officials said the country would be much better prepared now than in 1914 (Continued on Page Two)

BIG LAURELVILLE CROWD LISTENS TO CANDIDATES

A large crowd of persons helping Laurelville close its Fall Festival program, Saturday night, was given an unscheduled thrill when a motorcade, which included Sen. Robert J. Bulkley, candidate for reelection; Charles Sawyer, Democratic nominee for governor, and Cong. John McSweeney, candidate for reelection, swept into the village.

The three Democratic leaders were accompanied by a large following of friends and supporters.

Although not visiting the village for the purpose of offering addresses the men were introduced to the assemblage by Hubert Lappen, Hocking county prosecutor and chairman of the county's Democratic executive committee. Mr. Lappen is a Laurelville resident.

Each discussed issues at stake, touching on their records and paying tribute to President Roosevelt.

Some persons estimated the crowd at Laurelville at 5,000 at the time the nominees appeared.

Earlier in the day all three had attended the meeting of the state Democratic Press club at the farm of R. Kenneth Kerr, U. S. marshal, near Lancaster.

Sudeten Deputy Charged With Aiding Nazis; Nation Awaits War

PRAGUE, Sept. 26.—(UP)—Calm, prepared, and apparently sure of allies, Czechoslovakia waited today for war or peace.

She had arrested Ernest Kundt, a Sudeten German deputy to parliament and a leader of the German minority which Adolf Hitler has pledged himself to protect, and charged him with operating a secret radio station here through which he informed Berlin of all developments.

Two German journalists were arrested at the same time.

Her troops had reoccupied the Sudeten German region which Hitler wishes to annex to Germany and had dynamited bridges and other passages leading into the country from Germany. Over 2,000,000 men—every able-bodied man—manned the defense lines on the frontiers and the anti-aircraft defenses of the interior cities.

People Informed

The official calm was exemplified by the calm announcements of the government radio which kept the people informed of events that seemed to be pushing this war-created republic nearer and nearer to war.

Roosevelt Reminds Nations Of Various Treaties Binding Powers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(UP)—The White House summoned a special session of the cabinet today to meet tomorrow when returns are in on President Roosevelt's 3 a. m. personal plea to Chancellor Adolf Hitler and President Edouard Benes to avoid war in the German-Czechoslovakian border dispute.

The cabinet call went out "because of the existence of a situation."

By Lyle C. Wilson

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(UP)—President Roosevelt, appealing personally today to Chancellor Adolf Hitler and President Edouard Benes to maintain peace, thrust the weight and influence of the United States against the floodtide which is sweeping Europe toward war.

Reply from either now might invite the United States to take a direct hand in European affairs. His plea—first word from the President in this crisis—sped eastward as the British cabinet met and Hitler prepared again to address his Nazi legions.

It was timed to reach leaders on both sides before they could make public an incontrovertible (Continued on Page Two)

PRESIDENT PENS PERSONAL PLEA TO AVERT WAR

Uncle Sam May Be Invited To Join Directly In Negotiations

To Benes of Czechoslovakia and Hitler of Germany, the President addressed himself personally. The prime ministers of Great Britain and France received copies of the appeal through Secretary of State Hull.

Now possible is a reply from any of the four governments approached—one which might invite the United States to join directly in the fight for peace. But in his message, Mr. Roosevelt warned:

"The United States has no political entanglements." The President said no nation could escape some measure of the consequences of general war. He urged that negotiations for peace be continued.

"On behalf of the 130,000,000 of people of the United States of America," he said, "and for the sake of humanity everywhere, I most earnestly appeal to you (Hitler and Benes) not to break off negotiations looking to a peaceful and constructive settlement of the questions at issue."

"I earnestly repeat that so long as negotiations continue, differences may be reconciled. Once they are broken off reason is banished and force asserts itself."

"And force produces no solution for the future good of humanity." In support of his peace plea, Mr. Roosevelt recalled to Hitler and Benes:

1. That every civilized nation is a signatory to the 1928 Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war.

2. That most nations are bound by other treaties obligating preservation of peace.

3. That all nations have available treaties of arbitration and conciliation for peaceful solution of disputes.

Pact Not Invoked Correspondents were warned informally to avoid interpreting the Roosevelt message as an "invocation" of the Kellogg-Briand pact. The informal interpretation here was that it was to remind the major nations that they still are obligated by that treaty and by others.

The President cautiously avoided involvement in the Czechoslovakian boundary dispute in drafting his message. He limited it strictly to a plea for peace and against war and urged merely continued discussion to achieve peaceful objectives.

Conferences with Hull and Undersecretary Welles preceded drafting of the message. Mr. Roosevelt signed it between 12:15 and 12:30 a. m. today. It began moving by cable almost immediately and newsmen were hurrying to the state department in response to summons by telephone.

European and perhaps world peace is in immediate danger, the President asserted in his cable to the two men whose decisions must finally determine what the outcome shall be. War, he continued, would take the lives of millions of persons—women and children—under circumstances of "unspeakable horror."

He warned that the economic systems, the social structures of every nation involved would be shattered, wrecked. The United States, he said, is not caught in hatred's mesh.

Our policy, he told the men who stand today in the grim glare of Europe's spotlight, is adjustment of international problems by pacific means.

"The supreme desire of the American people," he continued, "is to live in peace. But in the event of a general war they face the fact that no nation can escape some measures of the consequences of such a world catastrophe."

"It is my conviction, that all people under the threat of war today pray that peace may be made before, rather than after, war."

"It is my imperative that people everywhere recall that every civilized nation of the world voluntarily assumed the solemn obligations of the Kellogg-Briand pact of 1928 to solve controversies only by pacific methods."

"In addition, most nations are parties to other binding treaties obligating them to preserve peace."

"Furthermore, all countries have today available for such peaceful solutions of difficulties which may arise, treaties of arbitration and conciliation to which they are parties."

Resort To Reason "Whatever may be the differences in the controversies at issue and however difficult of pacific settlement they may be, I am persuaded that there is no problem so difficult or so pressing for solution that it cannot be justly solved by resort to reason rather than by the resort to force."

"During the present crisis the people of the United States and their government have earnestly hoped that the negotiations for the adjustment of the controversy which has now arisen in Europe might reach a successful conclusion.

"So long as these negotiations continue, so long will there remain the hope that reason and the spirit of equity may prevail and that the world may thereby escape the madness of a new resort to war."

The Roosevelt appeal appeared substantially to follow previously uttered statements of United States policy. For its spectacular, forceful impact on world diplomacy it depended largely on the time and circumstances of its publication.

As it was dispatched today by cable, armed men were marching in Europe. Mobilization and partial mobilizations were under way with further concentrations of armies threatened as the continent of Europe seemed almost ready to resort to force in an ideological war. The hours preceding dispatch of the Roosevelt plea found cabinets meeting as Czechoslovakia rejected Hitler's latest ultimatum and France and England sought firm, common ground on which to stand.

customs posts at four places along the frontier, after driving back "insurgents" (Sudeten Germans.) Then it was announced that the government had formed a state defense council comprised of key members of the cabinet—an inner cabinet, prepared to act quickly and with force.

Then came the announcement most cheering to the Czechs—that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Britain had submitted Hitler's ultimatum without recommendation, which seemed here to mean that Britain considered it excessive and was prepared to back the Czechs.

When British and French ministers presented Hitler's new demands, the government station said, "they stated they couldn't accept the responsibility of advising us against mobilization. That means the great powers have recognized that the new conditions couldn't be regarded as a basis for further negotiations."

Chamberlain, the station said, after he had received the new demands, "seems to have recognized immediately that neither France nor Great Britain could further press Czechoslovakia to accept the new proposals and that it was necessary for us to prepare for emergencies."

None on Foreign Land "We've now manned our frontiers and given strict order to our soldiers not to fire a single shot. We can state before all the world that not one Czechoslovak soldier stands on foreign territory. There was no other way open to us but mobilization because we're clearly told that if we didn't do so, the responsibility for open conflict might some day rest on us."

"Only by manning our frontiers, could we have some chance of avoiding conflict. No one in the world can believe that this little country mobilized to attack anybody else and we believe the world will refuse most indignantly, the allegations in enemy propaganda that we are the aggressors. Our mobilization was with the knowledge, with the advice, and with the approval of the great powers."

The statement said that the mobilization was for the purpose of permitting negotiations for a settlement of the minority problem to proceed undisturbed.

A United Press correspondent toured the Sudeten region yesterday and discovered the Czechs in full control. Soldiers had blown up six bridges near Eger as a precaution against invasion. Dynamite charges were placed under other bridges so that they could be destroyed at a moment's notice.

Thousands of soldiers in full war equipment, including gas masks, were manning trenches and barricades behind barbed wire entanglements.

Clothes Changed In the courtyards of buildings in towns and villages, young men were discarding their civilian clothes for uniforms. The correspondent also saw some Sudeten heading toward the German frontier to avoid mobilization in the Czech army. Apparently, no serious effort was being made to stop them.

to protect industry against sabotage and espionage in event of war.

High on the list of problems is the so-called "hot money" which foreigners have been pouring into the United States in search of safety. Gold imports since Jan. 1 aggregated $847,000,000. Foreign investments in the United States are estimated up to $8,000,000,000. About $6,000,000,000 is in long term securities and some $1,500,000,000 in bank deposits. The deposits could be withdrawn easily enough. Sudden liquidation of many billions of dollars worth of securities, however, might jar American markets so badly that some protective device would be essential.

Stability Maintained Simultaneously, officials said that the treasury has maintained the stability of the dollar despite the critical international situation with a working capital of only $200,000,000 from the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. They said that at no time during the peak of the crisis last week did the external value of the dollar go out of control.

BRITISH READY FOR EMERGENCY

Anti-Aircraft Units And Other Forces Called To "Clear Decks"

Alexandria, Egypt have cleared their decks for action.

Coastal and other defenses preparations were speeded up. In case of necessity it was understood that British civilians would be enrolled.

Cotton warehouses were being ringed with sand-filled barrels for defense. The government was purchasing sand bags to place around public buildings.

Authoritative source expressed concern over the lack of serviceable gas masks for civilians.

BRITISH SHIPPERS TOLD OF DANGER ALONG COAST

LONDON, Sept. 26 — (UP) — Shipping was warned today to enter the Firth of Forth, the great bay on the East coast of Scotland off which the British home fleet has been maneuvering, only with pilots.

Shipping also was warned to take a cautious course at Spithead, on the South Coast of England, which guards the entrance to the Solent, Portsmouth and Southampton.

The admiralty declined to reveal the reasons for the warning. A spokesman said the supposition that the Firth of Forth and Spithead had been mined "is not necessarily correct."

The warning was sent out by the British Broadcasting company on request of the admiralty.

Text Of President's Plea

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 — (UP)—The text of President Roosevelt's message to 'Chancellor Adolf Hitler and President Edouard Benes follows:

The fabric of peace on the continent of Europe, if not throughout the rest of the world, is in immediate danger. The consequences of its rupture are incalculable. Should hostilities break out the lives of millions of men, women and children in every country involved will most certainly be lost under circumstances of unspeakable horror.

The economic system of every country involved is certain to be shattered. The social structure, of every country involved may well be completely wrecked.

The United States has no political entanglements. It is caught in no mesh of hatred. Elements of all Europe have formed its civilization.

The supreme desire of the American people is to live in peace. But in the event of a general war they face the fact that no nation can escape some measure of the consequences of such a world catastrophe.

All Pray For Peace

The traditional policy of the United States has been the furtherance of the settlement of international disputes by pacific means. It is my conviction that all people under the threat of war today pray that peace may be made before, rather than after, war.

It is imperative that peoples everywhere recall that every civilized nation of the world voluntarily assumed the solemn obligations of the Kellogg-Briand pact of 1928 to solve controversies only by pacific methods.

In addition, most nations are parties to other binding treaties obligating them to preserve peace. Furthermore, all countries have today available for such peaceful solution of difficulties which may arise, treaties of arbitration and conciliation to which they are parties.

Waterway may be the differences in the controversies at issue and however difficult of pacific settlement they may be, I am persuaded that there is no problem so difficult or so pressing for solution that it cannot be justly solved by the resort to reason rather than by the resort to force.

During the present crisis the people of the United States and their government have earnestly hoped that the negotiations for the adjustment of the controversy which has now arisen in Europe might reach a successful conclusion.

Negotiations Necessary

So long as these negotiations continue so long will there remain the hope that reason and the spirit of equity may prevail and that the world may thereby escape the madness of a new resort to war.

On behalf of the 130 millions of people of the United States of America and for the sake of humanity everywhere I most earnestly appeal to you not to break off negotiations looking to a peaceful, fair, and constructive settlement of the questions at issue.

I earnestly repeat that so long as negotiations continue, differences may be reconciled. Once they are broken off reason is banished and force asserts itself.

And force produces no solution for the future good of humanity. (Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt.

CHURCH CLOSURES ITS SERVICES OF HOMECOMING

Fred C. Clark was guest speaker, Sunday night, at the concluding service of the homecoming celebration of St. Paul A. M. E. church. His subject was "Faith, Confidence and Cooperation." He praised the accomplishments of the pastor, Mrs. Mary Lou Henderson.

Mrs. Lucinda Lynch, Circleville's oldest resident, attended the Sunday service.

During the week more than 200 persons registered for the various homecoming services.

SCHMIDT HOPES FOR "BEST" AS RABB IS HURT

COLUMBUS, Sept. 26 — (UP) — Beset by injuries at fullback and guard positions, Coach Francis Schmidt drove his Buck gridders through stiff workouts today in preparation for the opening game Saturday against Indiana.

Schmidt, who fears the Hoosiers as the strongest team in the Big Ten, awaited a definite medical report whether Johnny Rabb, only veteran at the fullback job, would be lost for the season as result of a serious knee injury in Saturday's scrimmage.

Rabb was definitely out of the Indiana contest and Schmidt groomed two sophomores, Jim Langhurst, Willard, and Al Zuchegno, Dover, both promising in early workouts, for the backfield post.

With Nick Rutkay, Vic Marino and Pete Gales, the three lettermen candidates for guard positions, on the ailing list, the dour-faced Buck coach was less well fortified at these spots than at fullback. Ed Hofmayer, a reserve last year, also was a doubtful starter, leaving the duties to Frank Smith, a junior reserve, and Bill Nosker and Jerry Spears, both sophomores. All of the guard cripples, however, will be available for some service Saturday.

VIMY RIDGE CAT DEAD

LONDON — (UP) — A cat that was at the battle of Vimy Ridge in France died at Covehithe, Suffolk, aged 23 years. It belonged to W. Folkard, a gamekeeper, whose son, then in France, found it on the battlefield and brought it home.

There seems to be need of a political hobby to keep voters from jumping primary fences.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, September 26

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL forecast is for a lively and enterprising day, although the high-pressure activity may lead into certain treacherous or malicious channels.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a lively and productive year, the success of which may incite venomous and envious attack of a subtle nature. It would be well to circumvent such possibility by worthiness, integrity of purpose and soundness of objectives. Take precaution and particular care not to leave weak spots in writings or documents, or other vulnerable points, being careful not to be involved in intrigues or plots.

A child born on this day may be inclined to be clever, shrewd, crafty, leaning toward intrigue, schemes and conspiracies. It may be very facile with its pen and probably speech as well. Nevertheless, it may be favored by its superiors.

THURANSKY IS ARRESTED ON "NUMBERS" CHARGE

Thuransky posted $50 bond to report for a hearing at 7 p. m. Thuransky has forfeited similar bonds on several other occasions.

TRUCK DRIVERS' STRIKE RESUMES AFTER DEADLOCK

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 — (UP) — A strike of truck drivers which almost paralyzed transport shipping here for a week was renewed today with peace negotiations deadlocked.

Drivers in three locals of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters again took up their fight for shorter hours that started as an "outlaw" strike. It was ended temporarily under a four-day truce, but the time limit expired Saturday at midnight.

Mayor F. H. La Guardia made a last minute attempt to prevent the strike by flying here from Los Angeles, where he attended the American Legion convention. His plane arrived at Newark airport after the strike vote had been started, however, and union officials said it was impossible to accede to his request for a delay.

At the request of the union executive committee the strikers agreed to exempt foodstuffs, medicinal supplies, newsprint and other items to be designated by the committee.

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU

BY BOB BURNS

I believe that the best way to check up on a man's character is to go back to his home town where they knew him when he was a boy. If he cheated at marbles then, then he's pretty apt to skin you now.

Not long ago one of those flashy, Hollywood dressers left town owing a tailor firm quite a bill. The firm wrote to the tailor in the fella's home town and said, "This man owes us for a full line of evening clothes and we would like to find him." The tailor wired back, "So would I—he still owes me for a play suit with brass buttons he got in 1902."

Heinrich Himmler No. 2 Man In Nazi Government

Gestapo speaks English, too, you know."

And it speaks French, Russian, Spanish, Czech and all the languages needed to make efficient the most far-flung espionage web the world has ever known, I learned. And its spidery brain is a youthful unpublicized Bavarian, with a thin "Hitler" mustache, pince nez glasses, a receding chin, and a general mask of innocence that hides one of the most fabulous talents for cunning and ruthlessness.

Himmler is a Nazi from the ground up, a die-hard. He is one of the hundreds of disoriented post-war German youth, shamed by their World War defeat, who flocked to the swastika banners of the Nazi storm troop bands. He earned his spurs in street fighting and the unsuccessful Munich beer-hall revolt which almost ended Hitler's career in 1923.

Hitler's Bodyguard
Followed four years of growing Nazi strength and votes. The icy and efficient Himmler came to the notice of Gregor Strasser, Hitler's radical lieutenant who feared the conservative intrigues of Hermann Goering. Strasser organized the Schutzstaffel (SS) Guards to serve as Hitler's bodyguard, and made Himmler their chief. (Ironically it was Himmler's S.S. guards who killed Strasser in the purge seven years later.)

Himmler sensed a career and, so firmly and efficiently, he built the S. S. blackshirt corps into crack soldiers, made them swear fidelity to Hitler and to himself. Himmler made these tens of thousands so reliable, that it was his men who served as executioners in the fantastic 1934 blood purge of 1,134 brown shirt leaders and their alleged traitor allies.

You do not learn the whole story from any one person. It must be pieced together and discreetly, you discover in Berlin. But Himmler's

New meadows usually make sufficient growth to justify some grazing in August and early September, but a closely grazed new meadow may winterkill badly. The plants need top growth to withstand winter conditions.

The 1938 United States wheat crop will leave a surplus of 367 million bushels after domestic needs have been met and 100 million bushels have been exported. The surplus will be more than 50 percent of the amount of wheat needed for domestic use in 1939.

Ohio farmers who intend to store corn for long periods should be sure the ears are well dried before putting them in the crib. Corn dries faster in the field than it does in the crib, but the tendency is to harvest as early as possible to avoid bad weather for field work.

Over a series of years, the cattle feeder who finishes fat steers to sell during the last month of the year will find a better market than at other periods. Prices for the plainer grades of cattle normally are rather close to those for the better grade fat steers during the late winter and spring months.

EMBASSY ASKS AMERICANS TO LEAVE FRANCE

PARIS, Sept. 26—(UP)—The American embassy advised American tourists and American residents today to leave France at the earliest possible moment.

American diplomatic officials previously had advised Americans to leave Czechoslovakia, but today's advice was the first given outside a country immediately involved in the Czech crisis. It indicated the seriousness of the situation. Any American diplomatic official may give such advice with specific authorization from Washington.

The Americans were advised to arrange to return home as quickly as possible. If they were unable to book immediate passage, they were advised to await an available boat at some town near the port they would sail from, rather than in Paris.

There was a growing shortage of steamship bookings for the United States. The Queen Mary of the Cunard-White star and the Dutch boats were all booked to capacity until October 15. Most tourists were seeking passage on American boats or those of nations likely to be neutral.

It was estimated that $5,000 Americans were in Europe at present, 20,000 of them being tourists.

The embassy issued this statement:

"In view of the complicated situation prevailing in Europe, it is considered advisable to recommend that American citizens who have no compelling reason to continue their sojourn here, arrange to return to the United States."

CANTOR-PRICE

Music and humor of a former day will scatter clouds of reminiscence when Eddie Cantor and Fannie Price get together on Cantor's opening broadcast of the season, October 3, at 9:30 p. m. over a coast-to-coast CBS network.

The name of Ziegfeld is certain to figure in the proceedings, and song and story from a parade of Ziegfeld hits will punctuate the program, for Cantor was Ziegfeld's greatest comedy star when the creator of radio's currently popular "Baby Snooks" first rose to fame as a torch singer under the Ziegfeld banner. Miss Price will be guest starred on the opening program and, in keeping with the reminiscent spirit, will sing "My Man."

Mrs. Franklin Pierce McCall, wife of the kidnaper of the Cash baby in Florida, will be heard on Gabriel Heatter's "We, The People" program when this unique series returns to the air at a new time, Tuesday, Sept. 27, at 9 p. m.

Mrs. McCall, whose husband is now facing the death chair, will present a vivid moral lesson from Other program guests who will be interviewed by Gabriel Heatter include Daniel Frohman, eighty-seven-year-old dean of the American theatre; Edson S. Brewster, telegraph reporter for Western Union has seen 7,500 baseball games in the last fifty years, and two young, dusky Harlemites by the names of "Slim" and "Slam" who will divulge the meaning of expressions used in the giddy world of swing.

THREE INJURED AS PLANE FALLS AT PORTSMOUTH

PORTSMOUTH, Sept. 26—(UP)—Three men were in critical condition today of injuries received when a 10-year-old biplane crashed from an altitude of 100 feet near Raven Rock airport here.

The pilot and owner of the plane was William Brand, 20, of Friendship, O., who was ordered grounded in Buffalo, N. Y., three weeks ago when he flew into the Buffalo airport at night without lights.

Riding with him when the plane crashed last night, shortly after taking off for a pleasure flight, were Carl Anderson, 21, and Curtis Morris, 45, both of Portsmouth. Brand suffered head injuries, Anderson internal injuries, and Morris a spinal fracture.

The plane went into a nose dive after taking off. The engine was jammed against Anderson and Morris in the front seat when the plane struck the ground.

Despite orders grounding him in Buffalo, Brand took off the next day and flew back to Portsmouth in two days. He stopped in pastures on the way home to avoid trouble at airports. He was returning the ship from New York, where he purchased it.

While fishing after the park closed, Poleck hooked an 11-pound pike, but was unable to land it. Woodward, fearing the fish would get away, dropped his line and dove into the water, grabbing the fish by the gills. It measured 34 inches in length.

GERMANY'S WEAKNESS

WITH the present line-up of military powers against Nazi aggression, plus the economic power of other nations, including our own, naturally sympathetic with the democratic group, it seems incredible that Hitler should plunge into war over Czechoslovakia. Experts point out that Germany is far lower in money, credit and material resources than she was in 1914. War would doubtless result in another military and economic blockade against her.

Hitler may declare airily, as he has done, that Germany is amply stocked with food, metals and so on, but he may be day-dreaming. It is unlikely that his general staff and economic experts think so.

Gen. Hugh Johnson, who was in position to know as much about the economic facts of the last war as anyone, and doubtless knows a good deal about the situation now, says that not only is Germany virtually going to war on a shoestring, but what advantages she has are rapidly disappearing through the preparations of her potential enemies.

Hitler is trying, Johnson says, "to bluff the world from a worthless hand, and cruelly to deceive his own people."

THE BIKE TRAIN

BIKE trains and bike ferries are the latest developments in bicycling. These are excursions by land or water from cities to scenic regions out in the country. Bicycle owners and renters take their wheels and themselves by this means to the great outdoors where they pedal merrily over pleasant trails for a few hours before returning to the city's crowds and labors.

Like the snow trains which in recent Winters have been taking store clerks and office workers by the hundreds to hills where they ski and toboggan or to lakes and rivers where they skate, the bike trains are increasingly popular. They are evidence that Americans have learned to play and that even the city-bound, white-collar workers who haven't time for golf and don't own cars may enjoy generous doses of fresh air, exercise and fun at moderate expense. The transportation companies that have recognized a great opportunity here are showing good sense, too.

World At A Glance

The State Department is developing a good bit of temperature over Latin America. The European situation is threatening on a much larger scale but Latin American conditions are closer at hand. Maybe Uncle Sam could not, for very long, keep out of a general mix-up in the old world, but it's an absolute certainty that even a small-sized rumple in the western hemisphere must involve him immediately. Our relations with Mexico, as we know, are semi-strained at present. Chile had a mean little uprising the other day. It was purely local, was suppressed quickly and didn't directly concern us, anyway. Still, it was an unpleasant symptom. Not long ago Brazil experienced a similar disturbance, quite promptly squelched, but also disagreeably symptomatic. Other Latin American republics are sizzling internally rather ominously.

MEXICO'S EXPROPRIATIONS

As to Mexico, President Cardenas' policy of governmentizing privately-owned properties naturally causes plenty of ill-feeling. To be sure, so long as he governmentizes the properties of Mexicans only it's none of our business, but when he governmentizes the Mexican properties of citizens of the United States, with no prospect of early indemnification, it does begin to be our affair. Perhaps we can stand that, however. It's when he starts, as he has started, to gobble the Mexican properties of Europeans that nasty complications impend. We can be patient, but we can't compel Europe to be patient likewise. And if Europe refuses to be patient, we're bound to be placed, under the Monroe Doctrine, in the position of defending Mexico—making us, in a sense, responsible for Mexican obligations to Europeans.

In this particular matter we're not much in sympathy with Mexico, either. We ourselves have talked pretty sharply to the Mexican government.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN, ROOSEVELT UPSET BY DESERTION

WASHINGTON — Nothing ever will be said about it at the White House, and it may even be denied, but the surrender of Czechoslovakia under Anglo-French pressure came as a blow to President Roosevelt.

He has believed privately that the democracies of Europe sooner or later must face a showdown with the ever more avaricious encroachments of dictatorship, or else be swallowed in the end. Every recent surrender to Hitler and Mussolini has seemed to him but a postponement of the final reckoning.

Perhaps partly because he was in the Wilson Administration when the new Republic of Czechoslovakia was born, he regarded it as one of the real democracies of Europe, one of the few countries spawned by the Versailles Treaty which had carried out the ideals of Woodrow Wilson.

Also, Ambassador Kennedy had had various conversations with the British which at first gave the impression that they intended to stand by the lone state of Czechoslovakia.

So when the news of the British-French capitulation to Hitler first was placed on Roosevelt's desk, obviously upset, he remarked:

"It just goes to prove that you can't trust the British."

LITHUANIA NEXT

You can jot it down in your foreign affairs note-book that the next important danger spot in Europe will be Lithuania, the Polish Corridor and the Baltic states.

Hitler's plan of action in this area is something like this: The Polish Corridor, given to Poland by the Versailles Treaty in order to separate East Prussia from the rest of Germany and provide Poland with a seaport, will revert to the Nazis. Hitler has worked out a deal with the Poles whereby they will return this territory, and in exchange will get Hitler's blessing on the seizure of Lithuania.

Lithuania borders Poland on the north and contains the important seaport of Memel, on which Poland long has cast covetous eyes.

In addition to the outright conquest of Lithuania, it is likely that Poland will bring Latvia and Estonia under its direct influence. They will become virtual satellites of Warsaw.

Hitler has other territorial ideas up his sleeve, but the Baltic move probably will be the first.

The country is probably safe as long as public opinion polls are in private hands, and anybody's free to take 'em.

A large and growing part of our population seem to think an education is knowing all the press agents tell 'em about Hollywood actors.

DIET AND HEALTH

Treatment by Diet Best When Stomach is Upset

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. THERE ARE three points to remember about the physiology of the stomach when we are considering what kind of food to order in illness. One is that digestion in the stomach is largely a preliminary or preparatory process; the second is that the stomach secretes hydrochloric acid as a digestive fluid; and the third is that the stomach tends to right its own wrongs by emptying itself at the slightest provocation.

It goes without saying that in an acute upset of the stomach the best food to give is none at all. In the first place the patient heartily agrees with this (if he can be said to do anything heartily) and, most important, the "stomach" upset may be acute appendicitis or some other reflex, in which case food by mouth is distinctly contra-indicated.

The preparatory work of the stomach consists in churning and mixing the food so that it is reduced to a mass which is easy for the intestinal juices to get at. But if the stomach appears to have difficulty in doing this the cook can do it just as well.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Pureed vegetables, finely minced meat, soups, easily digested desserts—such as ice cream—toast rather than fresh bread (which gets lumpy when the stomach function is slow), and other items of the smooth diet, are in order. Such diets are good for those chronic dyspeptics who are long and thin, who never have much of an appetite, who have dropped stomachs, and constitutionally distrust their digestion along with everything else in the universe.

Hyperacidity applies to the condition of having too much acid secreted by the stomach walls. It is very often a sign of ulcer, but may occur as a nervous reflex. The symptoms are quite characteristic and consist of a feeling of discomfort in the pit of the stomach, usually relieved by food—it is primarily a hunger-dyspepsia—then recurring after food has been eaten. There is also likely to be regurgitation of acid fluid into the mouth—sour stomach.

These people are soda hounds. They swallow soda bicarbonate incessantly and perfectly naturally, because soda neutralizes their acid.

Diet will do much for them. The foods they need are those which combine with hydrochloric acid most readily. The best article for them is the breast of a lean broiled spring chicken. Every word of that prescription is important. The meat should be lean and broiled, so as to make the three S's, sweet, sour and spiced possible. The breast of a spring chicken should be the exactly proper subject for such treatment.

I have known one such dyspeptic who repaired to a restaurant every night before going to bed and ate a dozen raw oysters. They too saturated his hydrochloric acid.

Fried foods are likely to upset this type. Toast or stale bread is better for them than fresh.

Anything which stimulates hydrochloric acid must be avoided—the three S's, sweet, sour and spiced foods. Pureed vegetables are in order. Mashed potatoes are perfect.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

FOUR-CARD VALUES

FOUR-CARD suit values are not properly appreciated by many fair players. A lot of them consider that an evenly distributed hand, packed with high cards, will produce as many tricks at no trump as at a suit bid. That may be so if the partner's hand also is evenly balanced. But suppose it contains a nice singleton, or a well-placed doubleton. The combined holdings then may be a trick or two, or even three tricks stronger at a good four-card suit fit.

This deal arose in a duplicate and at some tables the contract ended in 6-No Trump, which was made with the loss of one diamond trick, the original lead having been the diamond K.

At those tables the bidding had been 2-No Trump by South, 3-No Trump by North and 6-No Trump by South.

Those who bid differently were able to reach contracts of 7-Spades. They opened with 2-Spades, North responded with 2-No Trump, South 4-No Trump, North 5-Spades, South 5-No Trump, North 6-Spades and South 7-Spades.

The diamond K was the lead against 7-Spades. This was won with the A and a diamond ruff. A trump to the A was followed by another diamond ruff. After trumps were drawn, the thirteenth club took care of the losing heart.

AFRAID TO MARRY

HELEN WELSHIMER
Written for and Released by CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

"Of course, whom else would I marry?"

JUDY WOULD not have entered the dining room, after hearing the remark which Ronald Birrell had made to Abbey Bolland, and Abbey's answer, but another guest, also an early riser, came along and addressed her in a cheerful voice which carried to the two at the table.

"Good morning, Miss Rogers! Some snow storm, isn't it?" Judy had not known that the wind was blowing white sheets of snow around the house. Now she glanced out of the window and nodded.

Her mind tried to focus on snow, breakfast, light chatter. She must not think now of Ronald telling Abbey she would be sorry all her life if she did not "break" something. Of course, he must refer to Abbey's engagement to the count.

Ronald and Abbey greeted Judy and the guests with strained, polite faces. Their breakfast was nearly done.

Judy tried to drink some orange juice, gave up, and took a cup of hot, black coffee.

Ronald was saying to Abbey, in a low voice:

"Think it over and call me when you decide, won't you? Better not do anything until you consult me."

Abbey nodded. Judy turned her head away coldly. When she said goodby to Ronald, her voice was frosty. She knew he did not notice. He had a favor of his own to ask.

"Judy, Abbey is worried. I don't think she should be annoyed with details for the party. Can you take them from her, do you think?"

The party to which Ronald referred was a Christmas Eve extravaganza which was scheduled for the next night. A sum of money was being spent which would have endowed a small college, or built a row of houses in a model town, it seemed to Judy. None of her friends ever had indulged in such an orgy of elaborate spending, and she loathed her part in it.

The guest list was long and names appeared on it which were written neatly in the Social Register. Even Craig and Mary had been invited. Probably because Mary knew the count, Judy guessed. That was the reason Marjorie was included, too, she surmised.

"There is nothing for Abbey to do. Everything is being attended to," Judy answered as quietly as any disinterested secretary might have done.

"Good. I knew she could count on you." He lowered his voice. "Judy, Abbey's upset. Try to understand, won't you?"

And so are you upset, Ronald, Judy commented silently. Don't try to hide it. I know. You want her. You want—her!

They were as far apart as the two mythical poles—Abbey and this tall young man with the brave eyes, red hair, and stubborn chin. He came from the hills where a man was free, where his brain and his muscle marked him. He had fought his way to the top, not minding hardship, with no apology for his humble beginnings.

And Abbey—she was a hot house flower, whose father had come from some humble world, as Ronald had done. But Abbey did not talk of that. She had reached for him, Marjorie, prayed for a count. And now...

Abbey sought Judy a little later. Her face was so white, her eyes so circled that Judy relented. Maybe the girl did love Ronald. Maybe her heart had thrown off its silver and gold binding ribbons and she wanted to be honest. If this girl were sincere in her love, that was different. The count could be managed. Judy wished she might say that she understood and offer to help. Help—this girl—win—Ronald! The thought made her a little ill.

Abbey came to the point. "One of the maids is sick. Appendicitis, I think. Anyway, we are having her taken to the hospital for observation and care. We'll need someone else, at least until she's better. Somebody to look after the guests tomorrow night, in the powder room, and be useful here and there. Could you call an agency and have a maid sent out?"

Such a trivial thing—a new maid—when your heart is breaking up—a new maid for the powder room. Almost as though she had read Judy's words, Abbey started to laugh. She couldn't stop. It was a frightening, hysterical sound. Judy ran to the bathroom for a glass of water from the ice water tap, but Abbey waved it away.

"I'm better now. It's the strain of everything. Oh, I wish I could run away and marry Philippe tonight!"

"Philippe?" The name slipped out.

"Of course, whom else would I marry?"

"Why don't you?"

"He likes the panoply and fanfare. Oh, I'll see it through. If there are any outside calls for me, will you say I'm not in, please, Miss Rogers?"

Judy telephoned to an employment office only to learn that due to the holiday rush no girls who qualified as maids were available.

She recalled the long rows of girls who had waited for jobs so recently and spoke more earnestly. "Why couldn't a secretary, a seamstress, somebody else come for a few weeks?"

"Sorry, we can't do that," came the answer, and the woman hung up.

The second agency could not help her, either. Judy's next idea was born from the emergency of the situation. She put in a call for the offices of Danceland. She would get the janitor again, at the morning hour. When she did, she said:

"I want the manager. It's imperative. May I have his number?"

"Say, lady, he'll hang up on you at this time of day."

"Never mind that. It's important."

"You won't say I told you?"

"I won't say anything."

He gave her the number and presently Judy had the man on the telephone. She asked him briskly for the name and telephone number of the hostess who had been photographed for newspaper use in the recent story which involved Judy Rogers.

"More publicity?" the man asked eagerly. "The files are at the office. I'll telephone the janitor to look it up for you. Call back in half an hour. Her name's Myers, I think. Coralee, I guess it is."

Thus, on an early evening train, Coralee Myers came to the great estate. It had taken no coaxing to persuade her to give up her artificial glamor under the colored spotlight of the pleasure emporium for a Christmas in a millionaire's home. Her thin, eager face was shining when she arrived.

Judy explained the work to her, took her to her clean white room with its comfortable bed and private bath, gave her a printed schedule of meals and other activities.

"I wish I knew how to thank you for everything you've done for me," the girl said. "I don't, though. Maybe some day I can be kind to you."

"Is your home in New York, Marjorie?" Judy asked.

"In New Jersey. You'd like my family." Her face shone.

"You all live together?"

"All but me. I have to stay in town and I send home most of my salary. My father's leg was broken last summer and it won't heal the way it should. That's why—that's why I danced for a living."

It was nearly Christmas. Almost time for families who lived, worked, sacrificed and laughed together to hang stockings and sing carols. At boarding school every year Judy and Marjorie had helped the gardener's wife prepare the simple gifts for her family. They had slipped away from the long gray school buildings, during their little girl years, and popped corn, trimmed trees, made fudge, heard the story of a star that shone over Bethlehem and the shepherds who were so afraid.

Talking to Coralee Myers, the scenes came back to Judy. She and Marjorie had made a solemn oath that when they grew up they would never, never marry because people in their world didn't have homes and families that stayed together forever and forever. Not unless they were poor enough so they couldn't get divorces would they ever marry!

Judy smiled. Well, she was poor enough now. But there wasn't anyone to marry. She mustn't reminisce. She must help Abbey—get—her count. Abbey who didn't want a count at all...

Mary Dunlap Becomes Bride of Carl Smith, Jr.

Vows Exchanged
in Impressive Ceremony

Before an improvised altar in the living room of her home, Miss Mary Dunlap, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Renick Dunlap, became the bride, Saturday evening, of Mr. Carl Smith, Jr., at the Dunlap homestead near Kingston. A screen of Oregon huckleberry foliage concealed the fireplace, arched candelholders with slender white candles centering the mantel shelf. Small trees of the foliage, banked with many ferns, guarded the approach to the altar, which had large pedestal baskets of white pom-pom and large white chrysanthemums, and seven branched candelabra in pairs on either side.

Mr. Thoburn Ernest of Columbus played a program of organ music during the half hour preceding the ceremony. His selections were "On Wings of Song" by Mendelssohn, "Evening Star" by Wagner, "Ave Maria" by Schubert, using the Lohengrin Wedding March for the processional. During the ceremony the strains of "Leibstraum" were softly played. At 7:30 o'clock Mr. Smith and his best man, Mr. Richard Smith of Burlington, Ind., together with Dr. Herbert Scott of Pittsburgh, Pa., a cousin of the bridegroom, took their places at the altar.

Miss Dorothy Hobbs of Washington, D. C., maid of honor, led the wedding party as it descended the fern garlanded stairway, which was flanked at the foot with tall cathedral candles. She was followed by Miss Marjorie Rahn of Greenville as bridesmaid. Their gowns of cornflower blue faille taffeta were identical, having tight bodices with graceful flared skirts. Horizontal rows of puffed shirring trimmed the dresses from hem to heart-shaped necklines and short puffed sleeves completed the quaintly effective costumes. Each carried French bouquets centered with Queen Mary roses with rows of bronze pink pom-poms and blue delphiniums, and an edge of frilled tulle.

The bride chose for her wedding gown, a model of old ivory slipper satin, classic in its simplicity. The close fitting bodice had a heart-shaped neckline and sleeves with puffs at the shoulders, the long tight cuffs finishing with points over the hands. Her English half veil of tulle was held in place with a plaited coronet of the tulle. She wore her mother's strand of pearls and a heavy antique bracelet of gold, which was her gift from the bridegroom.

Shirley Dunlap, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap, Jr., of near Williamsport, dressed in old ivory faille taffeta, fashioned the same in detail as the gowns of the other attendants, served as flower girl. She carried a miniature French bouquet, Carl Berner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Berner of Gary, Ind., was in ivory as he carried the ring on a white satin pillow.

Mr. Dunlap met his daughter at the foot of the stairway, giving her in marriage. Dr. Scott read the impressive single ring service of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap entertained at a reception following the ceremony. Mrs. Dunlap received in a chiffon frock of Spanish raisin, wearing a corsage of rose pink camellias. Mrs. Carl J. Smith, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in medium blue sheer with appliques of crystal beads. Her corsage was of gardenias.

The bride cut the first piece of her cake, which was in the center of the table in the dining room. The beautifully decorated three tiered cake was surrounded with a garland of maidenhair fern with flat bouquets of gardenias and Mexican tuberose at the sides. Triple branched crystal candelabra graced the ends of the table. A silver bowl of white pom-poms was in the center of the buffet. Three cluster silver candle holders filled with tall white tapers were at the ends. Bowls of red roses and anemone chrysanthemums were LONG, SLIM lines continue to mark the smartest dinner and evening dresses. This slender line is a feature of a delightful dinner dress, a nice choice while waiting for the new mode to crystallize. The fabric is light blue crepe, and the décollete, square in front, is bordered by magenta velvet ribbon which drapes over the shoulders. The ribbon continues in two loops at the waistline and ties in a large bow at the side, back, with one end placed towards the front.

FRISCH HINTED

AS NEW PILOT

FOR BROWNIES

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26—(UP)—St. Louis Brown officials thumbed through baseball's "who's who" today searching for a new manager to replace Charles E. (Gabby) Street.

Admitting that the "Old Sarge" had served the club faithfully and had done as well as anyone else could have with the material at hand, General Manager Donald L. Barnes issued a statement that the Browns would have a new pilot in 1939.

News of Gabby's forthcoming dismissal followed by two weeks the discharge of Frankie Frisch as manager of the St. Louis Cards, and baseball followers immediately began speculating as to whether Frisch might get the Brownie pilot vacancy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—(UP)—The New York Giants today officially ended their two-year reign as National League champions. They are out of the pennant race and so are the Cincinnati Reds, who at one time this year had a chance to become the first club in history to bridge the gap from last to first in one season.

But there still is a battle in the National league, with the Chicago Cubs, riding the crest of a six-game winning streak, hot on the trail of the Pirates. Pittsburgh has a two-game lead but moves into Chicago tomorrow for a three-game series which probably will settle the issue. Each contender has seven games left—the Pirates playing three with the Cubs and four with the Reds and the Cubs playing four with the Cardinals in addition to the Pittsburgh series.

Reds Eliminated

The Pirates eliminated the Reds yesterday with a 5-3 triumph. Red Lucas, 36-year old pitcher, was the hero of the Pirates' victory, winning his 14th consecutive game over his former teammates since he left them five years ago. The Reds started an uprising in the ninth and the tiring Lucas had to have a little help from Bill Swift. Lee Handley led the Pirates' attack on Paul Derringer, getting three hits in three times at bat. Arky Vaughan hit a homer and Al Todd a triple.

With Clay Bryant pitching his 19th victory with only two days rest, the Cubs captured their 16th game in the last 19 played by trimming the Cardinals, 7-2. Six walks and two Cardinal errors combined with eight hits enabled the Cubs to put on two big scoring innings for all their runs.

The Boston Bees terminated the Giants' championship reign by defeating them twice, 3-2 in 11 innings and 4-3. Bob Seeds lost a fly ball in the sun which permitted the Bees to win the first game. Rabbit Warstler's single in the eighth won the nightcap.

Brooklyn and Philadelphia traded games by 5-1 scores. Dolf Camilli's 22nd homer with a mate on base featured a five-run rally which gave the Dodgers the opener. Claude Passeau pitched the Phils to a seven-inning victory in the nightcap, allowing only four hits.

Wilson in Relief

The Yankees again took it on the chin, losing a 10-inning game to the Red Sox, 5-3. Jack Wilson's hitless relief pitching for five innings featured the Red Sox triumph. The second game ended in a 2-2 tie after the six innings because of darkness.

Hank Greenberg was able to hit only a double as Detroit won from Cleveland, 7-5. Boots Poffenberger won his second game since he was recalled from Toledo.

Injuries May Riddle Red, Black For Granville Tilt

Preparation for the Granville booster game next Friday night was scheduled to begin Monday afternoon on the high school gridiron. Granville, coached by Bob McConnell, won 41-7 from the Tigers last year in a game contested in the college town.

Coach Roy M. Black spent a week-end considering replacements for several youths who may or may not be able to start the tilt. Co-Capt. Johnny Noggle is almost definitely out of competition with a bruised back muscle. A nerve is irritated, too, so his recovery by Friday is doubtful. He was getting about Monday on crutches. Several other athletes may get into action but their condition will not be the best. Marv Jenkins has rib trouble, Clark Martin has a sprained ankle, Paul Walters a bruised right arm, and Dub Nelson a bruised knee.

While the mentor was considering the condition of his boys, Harold Smith, an undergraduate who turned in a yeoman job in the short time he was in action last week, loomed bright in the Tiger coach's plans for the booster game. Smith can run and pass and he did just that against Worthington although blocking in front of him prevented much care in direction of his tosses.

It is highly probable that Smith will get the starting nod in place of Noggle next Friday.

The Red and Black line stood up well under the pounding it took before the thrusts of Fields, Worthington's dusky pliedriver. The same youths who started a week ago may get the call Friday although one guard spot is not certain.

The Worthington team suffered more from the game than did the Tigers. Ben Pyle, big tackle, is out for the season with a broken arm, the fracture being just above the elbow. Harold Jones, Negro halfback who was carried off the field after he and Marvin Jenkins crashed, was able to return to school Monday. He suffered a slight concussion of the brain and spent Friday night in University hospital, Columbus. He will be able to play this week, Coach Ernie Roush said.

EAGLES CLAIM

BETTER RECORD

IN GRID LEAGUE

BY UNITED PRESS

Philadelphia's Eagles, next to the weakest in the National football league last year, were judged the most improved team in the circuit today following their early-season showing of scoring strength.

They already have won as many games as they did all last year, and are second only to the champion Washington Redskins in scoring punch.

The Eagles capitalized on two fumbles to subdue the New York Giants 14-10 yesterday for their second victory in three starts.

The Redskins put on a five touchdown parade to hand Cleveland's Rams their third straight defeat, and run their point total to 79.

The Green Bay Packers battered the Chicago Cardinals, 28-7, for their second win of the year. Cecil Isbell, passing, kicking, running halfback from Purdue, gave a great exhibition although he failed to score.

PHELPS HURLS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 26—(UP)—St. Paul was a game in front in the American Association playoff finals with Kansas City today, and was ready to start an ace pitcher in the fourth contest tonight in an effort to increase the advantage.

The Saints won their second game in a row yesterday, 5 to 2, the effective pitching of Ray Phelps being the principal factor in the victory. Tonight, Manager Babe Gangel had Art Herring, another strong-armed right hand, assigned to hurl against the Blues. Kansas City's Manager Bill Meyer planned to start Jack LaRocca, who helped the Blues to first round triumph over the Indianapolis Indians.

WILLIS LISTON WINS COUNTRY CLUB GOLF TITLE FROM DEWEY BLACK

40-HOLE MATCH DECIDED AFTER BRILLIANT PLAY

Final Round Score Of 37 Gives E. Main Street Man Victory

CADDIES BANQUET GUESTS

Dick Melson Gains Crown As Champion With Net Of 81 Strokes

Willis Liston, E. Main street, was the new Pickaway Country club golf champion, Monday, after defeating Dewey Black in the final match. Liston succeeds John Jenkins, who won the title in 1936 and 1937. Jenkins did not play in this year's tourney.

Liston has been a consistent golfer during the entire season, reducing his handicap of 20 at the start of the season to seven at the time the title tournament started.

He won from Black 3 up and 2 to play. The match was scheduled to be completed Sept. 18, but due to rain the last 18 holes were postponed until Sunday. The second round was started on the 18th, but only four holes were completed and, since the contestants were even, they decided to start at No. 1 hole instead of No. 5.

Liston reached the final by defeating C. R. Barnhart 7 up and 6 to go, Dr. G. D. Phillips, 1 up in 20 holes, and John Eshelman 1 up in the semi-finals. Black went to the final round by taking a default from Lester Reid, edging N. E. Reichelderfer, 2 up and 1 to go, and ousting Johnny Mader in the semi-finals, 3 up and 2 to play.

Putter Does Work
Both golfers turned in brilliant work, Liston's putter winning or halving several closely contested holes.

The scores for the 40-hole contest:
Sept. 18:
Liston ... 4 3 5 4 5 5 6 4 6—42
Black ... 4 4 5 5 5 5 5 5 5—43
Sept. 25:
Liston ... 5 3 4 5 5 6 6 3 4—44
Black ... 4 3 4 5 5 5 5 4 5—40
Sept. 26:
Liston ... 4 4 4 4 4
Black ... 5 4 4 5
Sept. 27:
Liston ... 4 4 4 5 5 5 5 4 5—41
Black ... 5 4 4 6 4 5 5 4 4—41
Sept. 28:
Liston ... 4 4 4 4 4 4 5 4 4—37
Black ... 5 4 4 4 5 5 5 4 5—41
Par for the nine-hole layout is: 4 3 4 4 5 4 5 3 4—36

Caddies, who carried bags for the golfers all summer, were honored Saturday at a banquet as guests of the club.

Winners in various contests were Dick Melson, caddy champion, with a net of 81; Bill Kochensperger, low handicap, 66; Denny, Clifton and Bob Guman, most pars; E. Barr, high gross, 131; L. Barr, highest net, 99; Charles Hart, most strokes on one hole, birdie on No. 8; J. Woods, best attendance record for season; Jake Slagler, best behavior for season; Bob Moon, caddy whose services were requested most during the year.

Asked Frank Grice the official and well-known Ashville and community melon grower, about how near the melon season was at the finish. Told us that his seven-acre patch of both musk and watermelons had given a good account of itself this season. These melons were grown near what is known as the Cronley bridge along Walnut creek and this season was on its good behavior during the growing season and did no damage. Said that if frost kept away he would have melons yet for three weeks. Said he'd rather take the risk of raising a crop in the creek lowlands than that of the upland. Has had tried both for several years and knows.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Marie Antoinette was the movie queen of her day. She set the styles in clothes and hairdresses. She had ambitions to be an actress. She never turned her head to the right, because the left was her best profile.

Today, Norma Shearer, the actress, is portraying Marie Antoinette, the queen, who dreamed of being everything that the popular star represents.

These facts were revealed during the filming of the spectacular new picture, currently showing on the Cliftona screen.

The queen's theatrical performances were confined to the little theatre adjoining her Petit Trianon and were attended by Princes and Princesses of the court.

Louis XVI, always present at the theatricals, could never, according to reports, stay awake.

Shirley Temple always turns in a fine performance—as millions of fans will attest—but this time she gives you the time of your life!

She's a Shirley of surprises simply surrounded by singing, dancing, romancing, fun making show people. And if you're thrillable "Little Miss Broadway," which opened yesterday at the Grand Theatre is the musical thing to thrill to.

The grand group of troupers which aids and abets Miss Temple is headed by that scintillating stepper, George Murphy; the irrepressible Jimmy Durante; gorgeous blonde Phyllis Brooks and Edna Mae Oliver, the popular, prim and prudish grande dame of filmdom.

To make this the go-happy musical thrill hit of the year six, new Bullock and Spina melodies radiate from the romance and the hit selectors can choose from "Be Optimistic," "We Should Be Together," "If All the World Were Paper," "Swing Me an Old-Fashioned Song," "How Can I Thank
